

Diane YOUNG

DEMOCRAT FOR CONGRESS

MI-10

“I am running to bring common sense back to Washington. We need members in Congress who are not in the pocket of big business, or beholden to special interests. As a financial planner, I built my business from a folding table and a phone book to one of the largest women-owned financial planning firms in the state of Michigan. Throughout my career, I have guided my clients through financial hardships and successes, and I have experience tackling kitchen table issues that so many of us face.

As a Congresswoman, I will work tirelessly to make sure we are delivering results to many, not a select few.”

Diane
YOUNG
MI-10

Working hard and always helping others is something Diane was raised to do – from the beginning. The daughter of a secretary and a union carpenter, Diane grew up in Romeo and saw firsthand how when times are tough, a community can come together to support their own. Whether it was church potlucks, fundraising drives, or simply helping her elderly neighbors, Diane and her family were always there to pitch in for others. Neighbor helping neighbor is the Michigan way.

There were lean times at home, too, summers when work was scarce and Diane stood with her father in unemployment lines. But they always found a way to make it, like building new cabinets in exchange for dental work or family haircuts.

Diane worked her way through school – cleaning houses, mowing lawns, farm work picking beans and tomatoes, minimum wage fast food jobs – whatever it took.

It was in college at Oakland University where Diane met her husband, Randy. While still in school and newly married, they moved to New York for Randy's career and education, and Diane was recruited into the financial services industry. With her love of people and dedication to her clients, Diane quickly excelled, and her career looked bright. But New York was no place to raise a family, and when the opportunity came to move back to Michigan, Diane and Randy, along with their two young children, came home for good.

Four years later, Diane opened her own financial planning firm in Downtown Rochester with a simple goal: To help Michigan families like hers achieve their dreams. A business she started with a folding table and a phone book has now helped hundreds of Michiganders buy homes, save for college, and plan for the future; as well as advise scores of small businesses on their growth and success.

Along the way, Diane has become a linchpin of her community. She is a sought-after public speaker and coach, a mentor to young business leaders, a local financial planning columnist, and the author of a book on financial planning and empowerment for women. Diane has held volunteer leadership positions in the Girl Scouts of Southeastern Michigan, Paint Creek Center for the Arts, Inforum, the Rochester Rotary Charities Board, the Warren Symphony Orchestra, and the Financial Planning Association of Michigan, among others.

Now Diane is running for Congress because, as a financial planner for over thirty years, she knows the financial problems Michigan families face and how decisions in Washington impact our lives every day. It's getting harder to make it into the middle class, and all people are looking for is a fair shot. Diane will use her energy and know-how to tackle our toughest problems: Protecting Social Security and Medicare, the bedrock of retirement; streamlining our tax code to give middle-class families a break and ensure everyone pays their fair share; and protecting women's rights to make their own health care and reproductive decisions. From climate change to common-sense gun safety, Diane will fight for the change we need. Every day.

Now living in Warren with her husband, Diane is never far from her roots. She still has proud union members in her family, she still loves a good hardware store or lumber yard, and she still finds ways both big and small to help our community.

Most of all, Diane will never forget where she's from and who she's fighting for.

Proud Union Family

The daughter of a secretary and a union carpenter, Diane Young grew up in Macomb County, where she was raised to work hard and always help others.

Diane worked her way through school – cleaning houses, mowing lawns, doing farm work picking beans and tomatoes, working minimum wage fast food jobs – whatever it took.

Community Leader

Diane and her husband raised their two kids in Rochester and now live in Warren, where Randy works at Macomb Community College and is a proud UAW union member. Diane is a community leader, helping groups such as the Girl Scouts of Southeastern Michigan, and is a long-time leader in local Democratic organizations.

MI-10 DISTRICT RESULTS

Senator Gary Peters

2020: Won 50.3%

Governor Gretchen Whitmer

2022: Won 56.1%

A Weak & Extreme Opponent: John James

James has run for numerous offices across Michigan, until finally squeaking out a victory in 2022, where he won by just 1,600 votes against a Democratic nominee who lacked resources.

James is a top target going into 2024, which is why local and national Democrats are looking to Diane Young to get the job done.

- James has stated he is “100% against abortion”
- He’s 2000% for Trump”
- Against gun safety legislation “under any circumstances”
